Patrick's Cabaret Review, Artpaper 1986

In its third month, this evening of little-rehearsed, no-budget, high-energy shorts may just take you back to a time when places like these were regular social events. Patrick Scully, the man with a vision, teaches at St. Stevens in exchange for the use of the space. Many of these types of spaces folded in the past—due partially to an onslaught of bad art. The difference with this once-a-month evening is Scully. Having an aesthetic one can trust, a viewer/participant can expect performers such as Ron Nelson, Kurt Scott, David Lindahl, Eric Coursen, Susan Delattre, Laurie Van Wieren and even an occasional Michelle Kinney. But remember, expect anything; stay in the cabaret spirit.
